

Shelly takes the call. You stay with your client.

When your hands are busy or the salon is closed, Shelly, our AI receptionist, answers your booking calls. Each booking goes straight onto your schedule, and you get a text on your phone. Same salon number, from $99 a month.

From one phone call to a booking.

01

A client calls your salon number

Forward your existing number and Shelly picks up. She answers in the caller's language, such as English, Korean, Spanish or Chinese, and if the time they want is taken she offers an open stylist or time.

02

The booking lands on your schedule

The booking is on the stylist's schedule before the call ends. Combo services get their time and price worked out, and a changed or cancelled slot opens up again right away.

03

You get a text on your phone

Each new booking comes to you as a text with the time, client, service and stylist. Every call and its transcript stays on the dashboard.

A missed call is another salon's booking.

Missed calls during services and after hours

Calls keep coming while you are with a client, at night and on your day off. First-time callers rarely leave a voicemail. They call the next salon on the map.

Front-desk payroll and the language barrier

A full-time receptionist is a fixed cost every month, and staff who speak several languages are hard to find. Picking up mid-service breaks your focus, and callers in other languages hang up.

The phone in one place, the book in another

Copying calls into a paper book or a calendar is where changes and cancellations get lost. Looking up a regular's color formula every visit takes chair time.
